What the Picture Theaters Have to Tell You.

FAIRYDOOM DOES GREAT WORK IN "THE BONDSMAN"

Scores Personal Triumph by Playing Two Dissimilar Parts.

One of the most skillful bits of acting ever seen in photoplay is done by William Farnum, who plays two separate parts in "The Bondsman," a William Fox production of Hall Caine's celebrated novel. Mr. Farnum, who, while on the legitimate stage, appeared for five solid years in "Ben Hur," plays the parts of Stephen Orry and Jason Orry, father and son.

The types are radically dissimilar. Stephen Orry is a huge, heavy-limbed giant; a vagabond, indifferent to the needs of those dependent upon him. Jason, the son, who vows to kill his dissolute father, is a vigorous, clean-cut type. In the development of the action there is a lapse of several years and Stephen becomes an old man. The transition from the Stephen of middle life to the aged Stephen allows Mr. Farnum to display to the utmost his exceptional dramatic talent.

In one of the scenes Jason rescues Stephen during a shipwreck and swims to shore with him. In view of the fact that Mr. Farnum plays both parts, the scene constitutes one of the most remarkable photographic achievements since the advent of the photoplay.

This famous star has been seen in many great stories with big dramatic climaxes pregnant with compelling power but never one to equal the role of Red Jason in this mighty photoplay triumph with one of the greatest climaxes ever conceived. Critics are united in declaring it the greatest picture to date. This production was originally intended to be shown at advanced admission prices throughout the United States but by special arrangement with the Fox Company, it will be shown at the Pastime at the regular admission. Remember this engagement is for two days only. Arrange to come early.

WOMAN, "THE STEPPING STONE"

How Many a Man Achieves Success Through His Wife Shown in Tri-angule Photoplay.

The spectacle of Mary Beresford, the heroine of "The Stepping Stone," the new Triangle-Ince release starring Frank Keenan and Mary Boland, aiding her unappreciative husband in his upward climb to success, is going to strike a responsive note in the hearts of many women, and perhaps awaken consciences of some careless men.

Ever since their marriage, Albert Beresford had depended on his wife Mary, and always had he found her ready, willing, able. In the beginning, when it had been a hard struggle to make ends meet, she uncomplainingly had done the scrubbing and washing, and then had sat up half the night aiding him in his law studies, nursing, babying and encouraging him to good work in spite of himself. And, like most husbands who take all and give nothing, he is ready to cast her off when his beggarly goal has been reached.

At the Cosy.

The latest Bluebird photoplay, entitled "Naked Hearts," is based upon Tennyson's half-narrative poem, "Maud," in which some of the most charming lyrics which the master of lyrics ever wrote occur. The story is never fully told in the poem, and perhaps its very mystery inspired Rupert Julian to make a photoplay of it. Wherever he got the inspiration, it was certainly a good one.

The poem, for picture purposes, has been placed in the old south before the war, while some of its earlier battles were being fought. The characters, with one exception, have been turned into Americans, but the heartiest and impelling force of the beautiful love story knows no nationality or period. "Naked Hearts" is simply a gripping story, told in lucid detail by clever actors in support of Rupert Julian, the star, and Francesca Billington, who lends the inspiration in the character of Maud.

Can't Fool All the Chickens.
MILON, O., June 1.—C. F. Ewell says his chickens are laying two eggs every day. "I turn on the lights for six hours," says Ewell, "and then keep them in darkness six hours. The hens think two days have passed and they lay every twelve hours instead of every twenty-four."

Mausoleum to be Built; City Will Donate the Site

An ordinance accepting the proposition of the Portland Mausoleum Co. for the construction of a mausoleum at Olney cemetery and one providing for the future maintenance of the public library were passed by the city council last evening.

The mausoleum ordinance authorizes the cemetery committee to enter into a contract with the Portland Mausoleum Co., whereby the city is to deed the company a tract of land in the cemetery as a building site, said deed to be made as soon as the foundation of the building is laid. The building must be completed within two years else the land reverts to the city.

The mausoleum, it is provided, is to contain 100 crypts, receiving vaults or tombs to care for five bodies at one time temporarily and a chapel. The receiving vaults and chapel may be rented by the city. The company plans to finance the building by selling crypts to local residents and agrees to set aside $10 from each sale for a trust fund, the revenue from which is to go into a maintenance fund. The only vote against the ordinance was cast by Councilman Kirkpatrick.

$2500 Per Annum for Library.
The other ordinance, which passed unanimously, binds the city to provide an annual fund, not less than $2500, for the maintenance of the public library as long as there shall be a library. The finance committee is empowered to make a contract with the library board whereby this maintenance fund is guaranteed in return for a guarantee from the board that at least $500 worth of new books will be purchased each year and that the library will be kept in good condition. A petition was presented to the council last evening for a crosswalk across Willow street at the intersection of Willow and Tustin. The fire committee was instructed to hand in a written report upon the property of H. A. Medernach, recently damaged by fire.
